for the Supreme Court. Even if acted conscientiously it would be the worst possible thing for the country.

then his view of the nation's weakness and the need for a strong executive and laws should tend to make him free from taxes and the trusts men.

Mr. Bryan would name for the Supreme Court—and every fair-minded man knows it perfectly well—the best interpreters of Constitutional words he could find. He would be guided by the same standard as the Supreme bench men worthy of highest judicial office in the world would select the shiest lawyer in America. I say shiest, for he would not select men who had spent their lives as paid legal clerks of trust corporations. He would select the ablest American state attorneys, and then to look upon the Constitution as nation's great defender, and not upon it to look upon it as an obstacle to be removed by the law-abiding trusts and monopolies.

New Self-Contribution. "More civil service reform is always" and the support and encouragement of the Republican Party. The future of the merit system is in its hands.

Sen. Mr. McKinley, and I have a very strong deliverance to come from the head of an Administration which has removed no less than 100,000 men from office, and who turned them over to spoils-mongers as stock in trade.

It is disheartening, but not in vain, because as Mr. McKinley said, "I am not a spoils man." From William McKinley.

It is not surprising, because we do not forget that Mr. McKinley is a man who has been in the money issues in 1890 and now he supports the gold standard.

We do not forget that he is the only man who has been in the money issue who would be "criminal aggression" in a few months was not active engaged in the work of executive

We do not forget that he is the man who said it was our plain duty to let the Puerto Ricans absolutely free from the United States, and that in less than two months was being pressed to lead on Congress in the defense of the Puerto Rican Empire during an hour Puerto Ricans implored the United States and Puerto Rico to remain united.

No self-contradiction or self-dissimulation by Mr. McKinley can be alleged. He is sincere, as his eloquence has made him—himself.

campaign have been the reason he was not chosen to make the committee feel at ease. To be compelled to run a campaign of a kind and a number of months in a country where he had no experience in the Republican man-agers, and to be decidedly unenthusiastic for them.

Rogers and the Wall Street Fair.
At Cranston, West Va., Mr. Rogers discussed the full-dinner-pail proposition in response to a suggestion from a local farmer.

"The politicians asked me to say something about the dinner pail," the Republican party is crying in exasperation. "I said I was not making a discussion of the attack upon the foundation principles of government; and what a splendid man answered the question. He said that the dinner pail was the best thing that had ever struck the imagination of Independent men; and the only answer is that our Independent men are not going to be taken in by the party who have got ready to eat their own tails."

He concluded, I want you to understand that men (I mean society) who have got ready to eat their own tails are the party least to be trusted for the betterment of the government of the United States."

social dependencies and to maintain stability over them with the help of the American foreign aid machinery. The American foreign aid machinery is an entirely different proposition. It is no longer a question of social expansion, but of support of the American Government, of which the American Communities, the American system of free government have stand for over a century.

It will no longer be the question of the policy of the administration to change that the opposition has been the cause of the continuation of the situation. Each ticket has much to recommend it but on the whole we think following is the order in which should be chosen. First the socratic, second, the Republican, third, the Prohibition, fourth, Socialistic, and fifth the Pop-

TO VOTERS.
I have a vote for McKinley.

A vote for McKinley is a vote against personal liberty. McKinley stands for imperialism and militarism.

A vote for O'Connell is a vote for Stephen R. McKim and Mr McKim is a representative of the trusts which are grinding the life out of the American laborer.

A vote for McKinley means a vote to perpetuate all the trusts and monopolies which have already gotten such powers over the government of the United States as to make it possible for them to dictate legislation and increase the standing army of America to such numbers as will strangle the voice of liberty and override the will of the people.

Republicans who voted in the Democratic primary election are honorable bound to support the county nominees. The fact that you voted in the Democratic primary is a pledge that you will stick to the ticket and any failure to do so is a violation of that pledge and a reflection on the most sacred thing you possess, personal honor.

loyal and substantial of citizens, and his family mourns his departure as a very excellent father. He was from early youth an adherent of the Lutheran Church and was actively attached to her forms of worship and doctrine.

His long life and personal influence were for industry, honesty, and patriotism. When his illness was near his death the first scriptural passages suggested to the writers and his family members were "He is now at home" and "He is now at home" and "He is now at home".
